Gary,
I just got here and I've got you in Spc. and Phi. Ed.
and gosh how much I know you don't like it but you are one of the nicest kids in this school. So it's flush OK?
a friend,
Steve

"From the regions of the North-Wind,
From the kingdom of Wabasso,
From the lands of the White Rabbit"

From the halls of PHS,
Comes our yearbook - the Wabasso.

The name Wabasso has its origin in old Indian legends concerning the creation of the earth. "Wabasso" was one of the four sons of "Githche Manito, the mighty; the creator of the nations," who came to earth and took a wife of men. When Wabasso saw the light of day he fled to the north where he was changed into a white rabbit and was considered a great spirit--the spirit of the north country.

In the same country lived an old woman, Nokomis, daughter of the moon. Her daughter, Wenonah, was wooed by the West-Wind, Mudjekeewis and bore him a son who was called Hiawatha. Wenonah died of loneliness after Mudjekeewis deserted her and so the young Hiawatha was raised by the old Nokomis. From her he learned all about the world and even went so far as to have "learned of every bird its language ... of all beasts he learned the language."

As Hiawatha grew into manhood he began to ask about his father, Mudjekeewis and, after learning of his father's unfaithfulness, he set out to find him. Hiawatha traveled westward across the Mississippi to the Rocky Mountains, the kingdom of the West-Wind. There he was greeted by his father and for many days they talked together. Then Hiawatha accused Mudjekeewis of killing his mother, Wenonah. They fought a dreadful battle which lasted for three days. Finally Mudjekeewis stopped Hiawatha and told him to go back to his people. He had proven his courage but it was impossible to kill an immortal such as the great West-Wind.

So Hiawatha returned to the land of the Wabasso. On his way he stopped in the land of the Dacotahs and there he met Minnehaha, Laughing Water. He continued his journey homeward and told Nokomis of the lovely Minnehaha. Nokomis warned him not to marry outside his people but Hiawatha paid no attention. He returned to the Dacotahs and asked for the hand of Minnehaha. This was granted and Hiawatha took his bride to the wigwam of Nokomis. There a wedding feast was held and the couple settled down to a happy life together.

Their happiness, however, was not to be long-lived. Famine struck and took the life of Hiawatha's beloved Minnehaha. Her death marked the end of Hiawatha's life. He couldn't live without his Laughing Water and so he departed westward "to the Islands of the Blessed, to the land of the Hereafter."

And so the legend of the northland is kept alive -

"In the everlasting snow-drifts,
In the kingdom of Wabasso,
In the land of the White Rabbit."

In the halls of PHS,
In our yearbook - the Wabasso.

Administration

To the Students of Phillips High School:

The physical and mental growth you have achieved today is the result of years of slow accumulation of food and knowledge. The physical and mental growth that you hope to make in the future will be the result of the day-to-day efforts you take to provide that growth. Just as you cannot walk a mile without taking that first step you cannot improve your future without preparing for it today.

It is our hope that each student will take full advantage of the opportunities for study and improvement that are available for all in this great land of ours.

We have provided you with a guidance department staffed with capable men who can help you to seek a vocation, or to continue your education if you desire. They can tell you of grants or financial aids that may be available to you if you can make use of them.

We have teachers who are dedicated and loyal and whose greatest desire is to see you succeed. Ask them for help, and come back to visit them after you graduate. One of their rewards for teaching is to know that you are sincere.

You have parents who have fed you, clothed you, housed you, and paid for your education up until now. Their care and their faith in you will follow you wherever you go.

Your tomorrow, with its promise of greatness, is before you. Make your plans today to meet that promise.

Sincerely,
STAN O. GABRIELSEN
Superintendent of Schools

We are the Future Homemakers of America. We face the future with warm courage and high hope. For we have the clear conscience of seeking old and precious values. For we are the builders of homes. Homes for America's future. Homes where living will be the expression of everything that is good and fair. Homes where truth and love and security and faith will be realities, not dreams.

We are the Future Homemakers of America. We face the future with warm courage and high hope.
